BACKGROUND OF THE PROJECT

The Roya valley in the South of France is situated at the North-Western border of Italy. Since a couple of years this beautiful mountainous region witnesses a confrontation between refugees who cross the border illegally and police forces who persecute them violently. This means many ethical choices, confrontations for and between the (rather few) habitants as well.

The new festival "passeurs d'humanité" tries to put up the problematics and issues in a calm, joyful and constructive manner. The topic of this year is "hospitality and border", where historians, anthropologists, philosophes, artistes will contribute to point out problematics, solutions and 2000 festival people from all over Europe will share their experiences.

WHAT WILL WE DO ?

Masks, costumes, adornments

Participants imagine characters based on existing masks from the company's collection - hairstyles, clothes, accessories etc. With basic materials (fabric, raffia, felt, rags) and / or natural objects found on site, participants will be encouraged to create a "look", a silhouette, an identity card somehow - do we dare to be wacky - delusional to invent, enjoy these instances of freedom? Is there an initiatory reminiscence somewhere? Who is behind?

Visual artist: Ana Hopfer

Poetic dance

To give the masks a special experience, because if you cover your head then the presence of his own body and space take on a larger dimension than usual.

Accept this strangeness as well as the game "inside / outside" and the feeling « being exposed, seen by the other » goes through a body work of dance and setting in motion to give body to invented characters. The workshops will be nourished by Tai Chi methods, Physical Theater, automatic writing, contact improvisation .

Choreographer / Dancer: Aziz Boumediene

Public performance

Through mini-choreographies (zero pre-requisites in dance necessary), live tableaux, role-playing skits. The groups share their renderings 3 x 5' - 10' (with the title) with a "parade" : »who is who « at the end of the week.

The rendering will be integrated into the programme of the 2nd festival of « Passeurs d'humanité » on Friday 19.7.2019 in the village of Saorge.
